

ABSTRACT

5 A new cultivar of Dahlia plant named 'Montana' that is characterized by a short crop time of 6 to 7 weeks, a compact, upright and uniform growth habit, good branching and yellow inflorescences with ray florets only. In combination, these traits set 'Montana' apart from all other existing varieties of Dahlia known to the inventor.